

Being A Facilitative Leader

Build personal effectiveness, integrity and authenticity to be a participatory leader

What you'll gain

In this three day in-person course you'll explore the spirit and philosophy of Facilitative Leadership.

This is an opportunity to reflect on the stances of a facilitative leader, and how these are reflected in your leadership practice.

Understand the power and potential of facilitative leadership for catalysing leadership in others.

Who is it for?

People supervising, managing and leading others. Those leading change and learning.

- governors and directors
- leaders and managers
- facilitators and change practitioners
- development advisors
- human resource professionals.

What to expect

Explore your own authentic role and style as a facilitative leader and understand the responsibility required for ethically leading and facilitating teams and groups.

You'll learn the five characteristics or stances of a facilitative leader.

Māori knowledge and perspectives are explored in relation to each stance, adding richness and depth to your understanding.

Leave with a plan for your ongoing development, and the tools and approaches to operate effectively as a facilitative leader in your day to day life.

What participants have said

"Hugely beneficial to get Māori perspectives and introduce Māori concepts... and to explore your own style and learning how others' leadership styles are/ can be so different."

"Gave me new understanding of how to look at leadership and be a leader."

"Refreshed my awareness of the power of facilitative approaches. Opened up the potential of more authentic ways of being. Recharged my sense of responsibility to the world."
